

Our requirements for translated documents

Immigration New Zealand does not translate documents on behalf of visa applicants. You must get your documents translated before you send them to us.

Who can complete translations for visitor visas

Translations for a visitor visa application can be completed by anyone, other than:

- yourself
- a family member, or
- the immigration advisor who helped you with your visa application.

You must include the following information with your visa application, about the person who translated your documents for you:

- their full name
- their address
- their phone number, and
- information about their qualifications and experience that show they can understand both English and the translated language.
